Canada's fiscal update a house of cards, says Canadian Chamber of Commerce

10 Ways to Build a Canada that Wins - article 2

In this series, 10 Ways to Build a Canada that Wins, we'll examine the Canadian Chamber's plans for providing business, decision-makers and government with a series of clear priorities and objectives that, if addressed, will give Canada a competitive edge, improve productivity and grow the economy.

A strong and prosperous Canada depends on business growth, but businesses are grappling with daunting challenges—economic, political and technological—at home and abroad. To help them compete and grow, we developed the 10 Ways to Build a Canada that Wins to guide businesses, government and other stakeholders towards new opportunities.

In the year ahead, we will work with our chamber network to advocate public policies that will improve Canada's policy environment and create the necessary conditions to support business growth and build a more prosperous economy for all Canadians.

It's a partnership. We recognize that building a more productive, more competitive economy is a shared undertaking. It will take the combined efforts of business, chambers of commerce, all levels of government and individual Canadians. We all need to be involved.

6 Reasons Why Businesses Should Join a Local Chamber of Commerce

5th installment:

Ongoing Training & Education

For companies that do not have a large training budget, getting to national conferences or bringing in experts is out of the question. Chambers provide an inexpensive way to bridge the gap between no training and topic-expert training. There may not be better organizations at providing relevant speakers and guest trainers in a timely manner than chambers of commerce.

Based on member surveys and ongoing member communication, chambers can provide speakers at events or links to expert articles through emails and newsletters that members specifically request. Business leaders are essentially enrolled in a continuing education course in business management provided through the chamber — they simply need to attend.

One more reason, the Cold Lake Regional Chamber of Commerce is "The Voice of Business".
